

Donovan's sculpture purchased

"In memory of our beloved friend and former board member, Community Conservation, of Gays Mills has purchased the late Glenn Donovan's 'Cleaning Up the Universe' as a memorial for the local community," Cynthia Olmstead, a project coordinator for the group, said recently.

The sculpture has been installed at the Soldiers Grove Public Library, 102 Passive Sun Drive, and can be enjoyed by the local community as a wonderful reminder of Glenn and his art.

Glenn Donovan was a talented and award-winning sculptor, long-time community member and activist, life partner of Edie Ehlert, and dedicated Community Conservation board member for many years.

"Glenn always brought laughter and friendship wherever he went and was known for his wonderful sense of humor," Olmstead said. "His countless projects for Community Conservation, a nonprofit conservation organization working with communities worldwide and in the Kickapoo Valley, helped in so many ways. His dedication to helping all of our projects was the quiet, behind-the-scenes support that ensured the success of all of our partners in the communities and villages working with Community Conservation."

In addition, Community Conservation is offering a limited commemorative printing of "The Art of Glenn Donovan" by Jack B. Knowles for sale at $75 to the public (framed and matted). The sale of this commemorative photograph of Glenn's wonderful motion sculpture "Cleaning Up the Universe" will benefit the Community Conservation programs in India, Madagascar, Costa Rica and Wisconsin that Glenn loved and supported for many years.

Community Conservation is a nonprofit organization committed to empowering local communities to manage and conserve natural resources. To purchase a print or learn more about Community Conservation, please contact us at 608-735-4717
